About Academic Phrasebank - Academic Phrasebank

When we classify things, we group and name them on the basis of something that they have in common. By doing this we can understand certain qualities and features which they share as a class. Classifying is also a way of understanding differences between

One of the central features of scholarly writing is the use of evidence to make an argument. You must learn how to incorporate other scholars' writing and arguments into your own. In scholarly writing, you will often use paraphrased material or direct quotations from other sources to support your research and strengthen your academic argument.
